COMPANY IS CHARGED WITH CROWDED CARS

Four Instances Cited by Members of District Railway Commission, Who Will Appear as Witnesses Against Capital Traction Corporation.

For the second time within a few weeks action of the utmost interest to every user of the street cars of the District of Columbia, and of great importance to the transportation companies of the same territory, has been begun before Judge Mullovy, in the Police Court.

Information has been filed through the District Attorney's office charging the Capital Traction Company, in four specific instances, of overcrowding its cars. Five complaints of an almost similar nature have been entered heretofore against the Washington Railway and Electric Company, but have not yet come to trial.

This is the first time that information under the act of Congress of May 23—the Union Station act—has been made against the Capital Traction Company in the Police Court. The decision is of such importance that United States District Attorney Baker himself will conduct the case before Judge Mullovy.

The street railway company evidently intends to fight, and through its attorney, R. Ross Perry, entered a plea

TELLS TRUTH ONLY, SAYS MAJOR BURKE

"Buffalo Bill" Does Not Need Press Agent for Strange Tales.

Major John M. Burke, veteran advance man, press agent, and Indian authority, patted his expansive belt line, stroked an ornate pair of whiskers and observed feelingly:

"You may say that all the old features will be retained in the mammoth production known as Buffalo Bill's Wild West Show, now combined with Pawnee Bill's Far East Show, which will come to this city Monday and Tuesday next.

"You may tell the public further that the greatest babel of tongues since the late Esperanto congress probably will be heard when the big show unfolds here tomorrow. Colonel Cody's original exhibition covered about fifteen languages, which is talking some itself. Major Gordon Lillie's Oriental aggregation, however, embracing people from almost all sections of the Far East, will run the language total up to, say, twenty-five, no, at least thirty. But this is a mere side-light. I have been press-agenting so long, about thirty-five years, I guess, that these little details slip me.

High Dive of Frenzo.
"What I desire now to call the particular attention of an expectant public to is the high dive of Frenzo, a half-breed Arab, who, without the aid of mechanical appliances, makes one of the most thrilling dives it has ever been the pleasure of man to witness. I regard this as the thriller of modern times. Frenzo dives from a high mast upon an inclined platform arranged at such an angle that he continues his rapid descent until a curved end of the platform acts to retard his forward movement and he gracefully ascends to a height sufficient to cause him to rise in the air and land on his feet. There is no loop-the-loop automobile there, no mechanism of any kind. Frenzo does it with his sleeves rolled up and nothing concealed."

"How far does this Frenzo dive?" the major was asked.

"It matters not," said the major, reflectively. "A hundred feet is the same to him, perhaps, as thirty. There was no regular distance decided upon until it was seen just what Frenzo could do, and now there seems to be no limit."

He is a Fatalist.
"Frenzo is a fatalist," continued the veteran, after his words had sunk deep into the mind of the listeners. "He believes that no dive can kill him until his time arrives, and then that nothing can prevent his death. Hence, Frenzo is utterly reckless, utterly reckless."

And the major puffed upon a big cigar.

"Here are some clippings about this wonderful show," said he, continuing. "Out of them you ought to be able to get a good story. I really haven't had time to think up anything now. Do you know the weather is getting hot?"

Then the major shoved across a batch of stuff he declared had never been printed, except in different languages, and went ahead signing passes.

Major Burke is what you might call a consistent press agent. He scorns to gain publicity in any save the old-time ways. You never hear of him handing out stuff about milk baths for the elephants or mint juleps for the camels. Each time the major hands you a clipping he impresses upon the listener that it is true, and that even if overdrawn a bit a careless reporter did it.

"Hurry, Dearie."
"Mother wants to get to Eberly's, 718 Seventh street, to take advantage of that offer whereby they will pay our entire gas bill for the month of June."

"And if you are a good girl, mother will buy you a new dress with the money she saves by this offer."

RECORD ATTENDANCE AT ADVENTIST TENT

Many Visitors From Washington Greet Delegates for First Time.

By far the largest crowd that has yet been present at the camp of the Seventh Day Adventists at Takoma Park today attended the services in observance of the Adventist's Sabbath. Hundreds of people came to the camp from Washington, filling the cars all morning and afternoon, and giving the park the appearance of a religious shrine.

So big was the crowd that attended the religious services that the tent in which all the general conference meetings are being held was packed almost with the population of a small city.

It was especially a day of reunion, many of the Adventist visitors from Washington greeting for the first time members of the church leaders to whom they had been separated for years.

Among those from Washington was Representative Halvor Steenerson of Minnesota, who enjoys a wide acquaintance among the Adventists of his district. He was accompanied by his wife and two children. He had been friends from home who are here as delegates to the general conference.

A feeling prevails among the Adventists that former Elder Alonzo T. Jones, whose credentials as a minister of the Gospel were withdrawn from him by order of the executive council and who is fighting to regain his prestige in the church, intends to push his case to the limit before he finally drops it. The disinclination of the church leaders to discuss the case also pervades the rank and file, but notwithstanding the random comments heard would indicate that there is expectation of seeing the former elder put up a stiff fight to override the action of the executive council.

A report that Mr. Jones has consulted a Washington attorney to advise him regarding the conduct of his case before the general conference has had somewhat of a disquieting effect. Investigation shows that Jones' fight is likely to be a one-man affair, there being little or no disposition to create factional trouble in the present conference.

TENT WILL SERVE AS CHURCH HOME

Novel House of Worship for Covenant Congregation in Summer Months.

Beginning tomorrow night the Church of the Covenant will hold services every Sunday evening in a large tent at the corner of Sixteenth and Monroe streets northwest.

This novel house of worship will eliminate the objection to holding services during the heated months, and it is expected that it will become a popular place for Sunday evenings.

The services are to be in charge of the Rev. Tyler Dennett, assistant minister of the Church of the Covenant. Dr. Dennett stated today that the Covenant Church Tent is not only for the members of his own church who wish to attend services while the big edifice is closed, but for others who have no place of worship.

The Rev. Dr. Charles Wood, pastor of the Church of the Covenant, will preach at the opening service tomorrow night.

CROWDS WILL FLOCK TO COLONIAL BEACH

Colonial Beach will be a Mecca this afternoon and tomorrow morning of hundreds of residents of this city who will go to that resort to spend the Decoration Day holiday.

The steamer St. Johns will make two special trips to the resort, leaving here this afternoon at 6 o'clock and again tomorrow morning at 9 o'clock.

The crabbing is excellent and fishing good. While the water is cool those who have been in bathing say it is pleasant. In consequence of the fact that the repair work on steamers, the Colonial Beach Company expected to use for a charter party to the beach Monday has not been completed, the company will turn the St. Johns over to the charterers for Monday.
